PING PONG POINTERS

Ping pong porch parties is the alliterative title of the latest form of entertainment. Play ping pong people will, and as it is too warm to do so in the house, the veranda is brought into requisition. If in the evening, it is lighted with pretty Japanese lanterns, and the merry game goes on in the cool vine-wreathed porch.

Ping pong sticks are worn by the maid who is an enthusiast over the game. They have tiny rackets and balls embroidered on the ends of the sticks.

Then there is the ping pong shirt-waist. This is similarly decorated with embroidered implements of the game.

Even hosiers have caught the craze, and the up-to-date maid goes ping ponging with hats and balls embroidered on her silk stockings.

Ping pong belt clasps are also seen in the shops, and there seems to be little in woman's apparel that doesn't show some evidence of this fad of the moment.

For the hostess of a ping pong party come all manner of pretty souvenirs. Match holders, ash receivers, hair-brushes, all convey in some way suggestions of the game, so if my lady wishes to give prizes, she finds their selection an easy matter.

There are ping pong candy boxes to send the girl who is fond of sweets as well as of the game.

At the jeweler's, ping pong pretzels are legion. There are long pins, brooches, a slender bar of gold, and upon each is a couple of ping pong rackets, the "ping ponging" part being of mother of pearl, with an appearance somewhat like the veiling of the genuine rackets. The balls are small round pearls.

Ping pong molds for tea show small rackets, their handles tied with ribbons; the ice cup is fitted into the rounded part.

So you see ping pong has captured the commercial world as well as the social. The next thing to look for is a ping pong pickle. Some enterprising pickle maker will no doubt soon produce one.

DESERVED IT.

Chairman Cooper of the House Committee on Insular Affairs is a lawyer. He is frequently called upon by constituents to defend them in court when at his home in Wisconsin. A voter came to him last summer and asked him to go to court for him in an assault case. The other man was badly beaten. The complainant explained that the defendant had beaten him. He exhibited his bruises and contusions.

"What did you beat this man so unmercifully for?" asked the judge.

"Your honor, I'll tell you," explained the defendant. "He and I were playing seven-up. I was six and he was two. I dealt and he begged. I gave him a point. I played the three spot for him; he played the two. I played the king for him, and he took it with an ace. Then he came back at me with the queen and caught my jack. Right there friendship ceased."

"I'll dismiss this case," declared the judge, "for the reason that any man who would beg with such a hand is not honest and should be kicked."

RUN AND HIT GAME AS PLAYED IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

BY CONNIE MACK,

Manager of the Philadelphia American League Club.

In nearly every American League club there are players who work the run and hit style of play to a degree of perfection that is really surprising. Two of the most successful players are Lave Cross and Harry Davis, of the Philadelphia team. The former is one of the shrewdest players on the diamond, and has the instinct of guessing just the right ball to start on, and Davis seems to enjoy the distinctive ability to hit successfully with the player running. This is a great advantage to the team, and increases his value as a ball player.

With the present composition of the different clubs in the American League, Detroit and Chicago lead the other organizations in playing the most scientific game. The players on these two teams are very fast, and know the game thoroughly. They will keep their opponents guessing continually as to what to look for when next at bat. They will often hit the ball hard when it would appear as though a sacrifice hit would be the best play, and bunting when least expected. It is by these means that many games are won that otherwise would be lost.

There are many different styles of team play, and club managers have their own ideas as to what particular style is best fitted for the players. The Baltimore style of play is far preferable to all others when the club is made up of fast sprinters and players of nerve and good judgment. There is always danger in trying to force a play to do certain work he is entirely unfitted for, and it often results in spoiling many good plays. It is advisable to allow the players to discover their own particular adaptability to any special style of playing. When they have tried many styles, they will find they can do one special style better than another. They should then bend all their energies in this direction towards making a feature of it. All ball players have not become famous through following the same style of play, and the history of the game in America shows that those names that are now household words, coupled with them at the time a particular value in a special style of playing.

KAUAI REPUBLICANS

GAINING STRENGTH

Lihue, Kauai, July 5.—The Republican precinct club of Koloa, Kauai, held an adjourned meeting Monday evening, July 30, at Koloa District courthouse, in conformity with party regulations, for the election of officers for the club for the coming two years. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and was well attended, by both natives and haoles.

The following persons were elected to office: P. McLane, president; E. E. Conant, first vice president; M. A. Rogers, second vice president; Henry Blake, secretary; J. S. Perry, assistant secretary; C. Wilcox, treasurer; Judge Kanaka, C. E. Miller, and A. Miller, judges of election; E. W. Russell and J. Jensen, members of the executive committee.

Republican voters on Kauai take a great interest in politics, as they feel that the good work done at the last term of Circuit Court by inducing 115 foreigners to become American citizens, gives the party a big show to win at the coming election.

It is expected that at least 100 more foreigners on Kauai will take out their naturalization papers at the next term of Circuit Court in September, and thereby increase the number of qualified voters for the coming election over the number voting at the last election by about three hundred.

STRONG ENOUGH.

A gentleman wishing some bushes removed from his garden, told his gardener to pull them up by the roots. Some time after he went into the garden digging trenches around the bushes.

"Why, George," he said, "you need not dig round those small bushes in that way. I am sure you are strong enough to pull them up by the roots." "Oh, yes, sir," replied the gardener, "I am strong enough, but I must dig a little before I can catch hold of the roots. If you told me to pull them up by the branches I could have removed them."—London Answers.
